Friends,

Today as I celebrate my 10-year anniversary of ministry with Countryside Community Church, I am discerning my continuing call from God to participate in God's activity in the world and to help lead others to opportunities for them to discern their own callings to participate with God.

Countryside is discerning its future for ministry as well, and is heading in a direction that I do not feel called to follow. This is a hard decision for me as I have loved the ministry I have been called to accomplish here at Countryside, but feel as though my gifts in ministry would not be used to their full potential if I were to follow this new direction. I believe it is time for me to step out and step forward into another ministry setting that would challenge me and expand my gifts in new areas of leadership. I have no idea where I am being called to serve at this time, but I am certain that moving on is in the best decision for both myself and Countryside.

I thank you for allowing me to journey with Countryside for these last 10 years.

Peace to you,

Chris
